Eagle County School District hires Matthew Miano as Chief Communications Officer

Previous Summit County resident eager to return to the high country

Eagle, CO – Eagle County School District announced today that Matthew Miano has been selected as Chief Communications Officer (CCO) and will begin in that role over the summer. Miano has been serving as the Senior Events Manager for the City of Asheville in Asheville, North Carolina. Prior to that experience, he has worked in marketing and communications positions for the Town of Dillon in Summit County.

“We’re excited to welcome Matt back to the mountains as our next Chief Communications Officer,” said Superintendent Philip Qualman. “His work in the public sector and leadership experience are an excellent fit for our community.”

While in Asheville, Miano also served as the Public Relations Manager for Buncombe County’s Human and Health Services Department to guide their pandemic response and community outreach during the height of the COVID-19 pandemic.

“I have been impressed with Eagle County School's pandemic response,” said Miano. “I can't wait to join an organization so firmly entrenched in its students and its community as we transition towards an exciting future.”

Miano has a Bachelor of Arts degree in Communications from University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. In his free time, Miano enjoys biking, camping and skiing with his wife and two children.

Join us in welcoming Matt Miano as Chief Communications Officer beginning summer 2021.
